Located in Abensberg, Germany, Brauerei zum Kuchlbauer is a traditional, family-owned Bavarian brewery with origins tracing back to around 1300, making it home to one of the world's oldest official brewing rights. Specialising in wheat beers (Weissbier), the brewery combines regional ingredients, such as hops from the nearby Hallertau, with time-honoured open fermentation and bottle-maturation techniques.

Kuchlbauer is equally famous for merging craft brewing with architectural art. Its grounds feature the Kuchlbauer Tower, a 35-metre whimsical landmark designed by renowned Austrian artist Friedensreich Hundertwasser and completed by architect Peter Pelikan. Today, Kuchlbauer's World of Beer serves as both an active brewery and a major tourist destination, combining heritage, art exhibitions and a traditional beer garden.
